President Douthat Comments

Dear Friends:

It is a great honor to have been selected as the 14th president of Lycoming College. During the past several weeks, I have met with members of the faculty and with trustees, students, alumni, and friends of the College. Through those encounters I have recognized the inherent strength and energy of this institution.

Emily and I arrived with our children, Mark and Anna, in Williamsport in mid-July. Our welcome in the community and on the campus has been warm and gracious and, even amidst the boxes, we are beginning to feel at home. Fred and Ann Blumer had worked hard to make the transition an easy one for us, and we are grateful for their support. I had the opportunity to spend several days with them, and I know that you join me in wishing them the very best. Dr. Blumer has returned to the classroom and has been justly honored as the recipient of the Theo and Belle Moll Chair of Faith and Life at Baldwin-Wallace College in Ohio.

The campus has now received the Class of 1993, an energetic group of young men and women who will carry on the great traditions of the College. I welcome the opportunity to work with them and with our other students, faculty, and staff. I know that with your help and support Lycoming College will provide an excellent educational experience for our students.

Sincerely,

President

Reflections On Apollo 11

By Dr. David G. Fisher

Twenty years ago as a 14-year old boy, I sat transfixed along with my entire extended family in front of my grandparent's color television set on a Sunday afternoon in July watching as an age-old dream was about to be realized. There was very little conversation in the living room as we listened closely to the words coming back from the Moon as the intrepid astronauts, Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin, descended to the surface in their unearthly spacecraft called Eagle. The hopes and prayers of an entire world gently guided Eagle to a safe touchdown in the Sea of Tranquility. Matter-of-factly the astronauts reported, "Houston, Tranquility Base. The Eagle has landed." Despite the silence, a collective sigh of relief permeated my grandparent's living room. For me, it was the culmination of a fascination begun over seven years earlier, when on February 20, 1962, as a first grade student home from elementary school because of a childhood illness, I was propped up in front of our black and white television set by my mother who urged me to watch history being made. As John Glenn rode his primitive Mercury capsule into orbit, I was infected with space fever and the direction of my life was set. Ever since I have been closely following the developments of space exploration.

Man has landed on the moon not once but six times. Twelve men added their footprints to the scarred lunar surface. Each reacted to the remarkable journey in a different way. Each returned with the knowledge that the Earth is just a small island in the vast dark expanse of space. In all that unkind, hostile void, there exists a small fragile spacecraft called Earth. Each could sense the ultimate futility of the minor quarrels, disputes, and hatreds which exist here on Earth. From space no one can see national boundaries which exist in the minds of humans. No one can see cultural barriers, friendly or hostile peoples. From space, one can see we are all part of one human community. One of the most important side-benefits of Apollo was the view of the Earth, as seen from the lunar surface. Hanging there against the blackness of space, Earth looks so small and unimportant. One can see that God intended us to be one people, working and living together to pilot our spaceship Earth through space in search of truth and understanding. A victory in war, perhaps the capture of a strategic town, seems to be a very important occurrence to some on Earth. From space, that same town would look like a tiny dot, terribly unimportant in comparison to the Earth as a whole. If more people could see the fragility of Earth from the barren lunar surface, perhaps we would all make "a giant leap for mankind" by moving toward true brotherhood, black and white, young and old, liberal and conservative, leaders and followers, all working and living as one people. Over the centuries we have splintered into different grains, everyone too concerned with his or her own petty wants and desires to bother with his or her neighbor. Has Apollo helped bring us closer together? No, but it at least gave us the unsettling notion that we are not the most important things in the universe. We are a people on a relatively unimportant planet in a small solar system in a remote part of the galaxy, one galaxy among millions more that we now know to exist.

What has Apollo given us? That is a hard question to answer. How do we measure psychological and technological gains in terms of dollars and cents? What is the monetary worth of a pound of lunar soil? Can a price tag be put on the view of the Earth from space? What is the worth of saving just one life? Medical gains spun-off from the technology which took us to the Moon have kept thousands of people alive who would have otherwise died.

Apollo gave us a front row seat in an adventure, an exploration of the unknown. Twelve men walked on the Moon, but for those who lived through Apollo, the Moon began to seem a familiar place. Those of us who followed Apollo closely could sense the adventure and daring of the undertaking. Disregarding the immense scientific potential of the Moon, we could look at the stark beauty of the surface of this dead world. If only in spirit, we truly were there on the Moon too as Neil Armstrong stepped off the lunar module Eagle to take his "small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind." We, the American people, were able to contribute and participate in one of the most important scientific research projects of all time. We, the American people, built and financed the entire Apollo effort. We were the ones who went to the Moon. We could follow the footsteps of our Apollo astronauts as they explored the shores of a new world. We, a whole nation, were there. Now the excitement of that undertaking has faded. We have been to the Moon. It is no longer a thrill to many, but neither is flying in an airplane. Today we take aviation for granted. Does that mean aviation has been a failure? No, quite the contrary, aviation has been an immense success. Today, many Americans are cynical of space flight, yet it continues. Space flight has outgrown its glory days. Until the Challenger accident space travel was becoming commonplace and being taken for granted. The very people who sat glued to their TV sets with their fingers crossed as the Eagle came closer to a touchdown and were relieved when they heard, "The Eagle has landed," are now the least bit aroused by yet another advance in manned space flight. Space flight is fast becoming the success aviation has been. The frontier is being pushed back further and further.

What did Apollo give the taxpayer? Independent research agencies have estimated that for every dollar spent on Apollo there has been a seven-fold return in technological benefits. Spinoffs from the space program are too numerous to list. Giant advances in computer technology, miniaturized electronics, data storage, medical techniques, global communications, and weather forecasting have been a direct result of the unique demands of Apollo to push beyond the current state of knowledge. Certainly all of these advances would have come in time. The key words here are—in time. Apollo pushed technology ahead of its natural growth. It has been estimated that Apollo advanced computer technology at least 5-10 years, setting in motion an accelerated evolution that continues even today. Apollo brought things of the future to the present-day world.

Why we decided to go to the Moon is a long and curious story, one which can never be fully detailed. The major driving forces were political. Plans for space flight were presented to President Eisenhower, but were treated with gross indifference. President Kennedy stepped into office in the midst of the Cold War, with America appearing to falter behind the Soviet Union in many respects. The Soviets had launched the first satellite into Earth orbit and openly threatened the United States with destruction. Kennedy, like Eisenhower, was not in favor of an expensive manned space program, but Vice President Lyndon Johnson and two major events strongly influenced Kennedy toward the lunar challenge. Johnson, chairman of the President's Space Council, saw space flight as a clear way of forging ahead of the Russians in the technological side of the Cold War and believed space had practical benefits for mankind. He pressured Kennedy and key Congressmen into approving manned space flight programs. Then came the foreign policy humiliation at the Bay of Pigs, quickly followed by the Soviet orbital flight of Yuri Gagarin. Kennedy needed something to restore United States prestige and his young presidency. A memorandum was sent to Johnson asking for recommendations for a space goal which the United States could accomplish before the Russians. Kennedy asked about a space station, a circumlunar flight, and a lunar landing. Of the three, a lunar landing seemed a goal we might have a chance of achieving before the Russians. So, in late May 1961, just a few days after the flight of Freedom 7, President Kennedy committed the nation to a manned lunar landing before the end of the decade.

The decision was a wise one; we did indeed accomplish the goal first. A lesser goal might have been forfeited to yet another Soviet first. At the time this commitment was made, the Soviets had an advantageous lead in rocket boosters and spacecraft systems, a lead which they were to hold for many years. But out of the despair and gloom of the Apollo 204 fire came a new push, which sent American astronauts to the Moon before 1970. A Phoenix rose out of the ashes of the Apollo fire and soared to the Moon. When it became apparent the Soviets would lose the Moon Race, they dropped out and redesigned their purposes in space toward Earth-orbiting space stations.

Apollo provided a textbook example of effective mass organization toward a common goal. Hundreds of thousands of people, both Americans and foreign, contributed in ways ranging from bolt tightening to flight management. Organization was fast and highly mobile. Data and communications passed quickly throughout the network. When a difficult problem arose, teams quickly mobilized to find a solution, utilizing experts from all over the country. The likes of the Apollo organization had never been seen before and it may indeed be quite some time before another one like it can be materialized. The Manhattan project pales in comparison to Apollo.

“From space no one can see national boundaries which exist in the minds of humans. No one can see cultural barriers, friendly or hostile peoples. From space, one can see we are all part of one human community.”

Apollo had its obvious scientific benefits, but after all, the lunar landing itself was an engineering stunt. Granted, Apollo was not designed initially as a scientific enterprise, but as it matured, the greatest possible science was woven into the fabric of each lunar flight. What do the moon rocks tell us? Study continues on the ample supply of lunar material brought back by Apollo astronauts. Indeed, results are still preliminary. The course of investigation will continue for decades to come. Many more new questions were raised for each answer obtained. We stopped going to the Moon just when we learned how best to uncover its secrets.

Early findings were as conflicting as they were unique. Evidence for one theory would be found, but shortly thereafter disproving evidence put holes in that particular theory. Lunar scientists thought they were going around in circles. Often they wished the Apollo program would slow down; no sooner would the preliminary investigation of one flight's lunar samples be completed, a new batch of lunar samples would be given to them. It was exceedingly difficult to piece together all the data and generalize. It seems our Moon is something entirely different from anything we expected.

Do You Remember?

By: Robert H. Seewald '49

History as a subject for study seems to some people uninteresting, but history in the making is seldom dull. I need not remind you that you, as the first class to graduate and receive degrees from Lycoming College, are making history. John W. Long, President, Lycoming College. (1949 Arrow)

English composition was never one of my major contributions to the academic world. Mrs. Jefferies of Comp. I undoubtedly would not argue that point! I will now prove that had I majored in English, I would probably still be a student at Lycoming, instead of being able to look back at forty years and remember.

Forty years. College graduate - College science teacher -

Pseudo-senior citizen - Senior citizen - Living fossil. Forty years.

When you're 77 inches tall (6 feet 5 inches for those math majors) it's difficult to be short, but I'll imitate Hanes underwear and be brief. (Forgive me but remember I didn't major in English).

Now, principally from my class notes, some remembrances.

Faculty

"The only way to solve problem five is to know how to do the first five problems." (Joseph Babcock, physics)

"Ice + Water = Ice water; unless the ice is melted." (Mabel K. Bauer, chemistry)

"History is only the philosophy of events. We do not have time to spend on philosophy." (Robert H. Ewing, history)

"Bis-durch-fur-geggen,-um-weider - Aus-ausser-bei-nacht-von-zu. One set takes the dative case, the other the accusative case. I know which is which, I hope you do." (Phil G. Gillette, languages)

"It takes a heap of heaping to make a heap a heap." (Charles Herbert Picht, philosophy)

"You must know the Cavalier Poets, Suckling and Lovelace or is it Lovelace and Suckling?" (Eric V. Sandin, English)

"It it weren't for our genes we would have the intelligence of water." (George S. Shortess, biology)

"All that one has to do to remember, is not to forget." (Clifford S. ... philosophy)

"I would like to delve into this further, but we can cover that in an exam." (James W. Sterling, English)

"Bulls buy, bears sell. In 1939 Texas exported 139,000 crates of pink grapefruit." (John A. Streeter, economics and business)

"But Stanley, the South did not win the Civil War." (Helen Breese Weidman, history)

Activities

Football — We were undefeated until our first game. In 1949 we only lost seven games. Thank the good Lord we only played seven games.

Basketball — Much better. After our first four games we were at two wins and two losses. The rest of the season we were building for next year.

Dances — The only thing more brilliantly illuminated in our universe is the sun.

Band — One majorette, one tuba and fifteen other brave people.

The Arrow — Last year we were known as "THE DART." This year we are known as "THE ARROW." Arrows are advanced over darts.

Language clubs — (French club) Found that the major difference between American and French students is that French students speak French fluently. (German club) Learned folk dances. Some of them might have been German folk dances. (Spanish club) At their annual banquet found out that spaghetti is not the national food of Spain.

Whether we deal with people or with institutions forty years is a long time. I, along with the other forty-four members of the first class to graduate from Lycoming College, am proud of the tradition we started. The students who preceded us - those who will follow us, must remember our obligations to Lycoming. If you forgot the past and are not cognizant of the future, you died forty years ago.

See, I did imitate Hanes underwear.

Remember the past - Who could forget it?

Dr. Robert H. Seewald was a member of Lycoming's first graduating class. He is retired from Kutztown University.

Ode To Lycoming College

By: Amanda Gates '89

When I was asked to write this piece about my years at Lycoming I was in the midst of finals and a job interview. I had no idea what I would write about, or what angle I would take. Now that I am a recent graduate out in "the real world" and have had a little time to think this over, I realize the assignment turned out to be more than I bargained for. Nagging questions kept creeping into my mind. How can I sum up the last four years of my life without sounding like a Hallmark card?

I didn't want to take the well worn and often written path of undying love for my alma mater, nor the ever popular "I owe everything I am to Lycoming" road. Neither did I want to wear out the "Lycoming is all about special people" approach. I was faced with a dilemma.

I always like to be original, so it seemed that none of the above would do in this situation. How could I be different, yet not mention all of the wonderful things that sum up four of the most incredible years of my life—I couldn't! So, instead, I have written a poem about Lycoming. It is about my experiences, but I am sure everyone has shared or can understand them.

*We arrived in the rain, it was falling quite fast,
It seemed like forever, but we made it last.
I paid all my bills, and unpacked my things,
Oh the sweet sorrow that Mom's good-bye brings.*

*Making new friends and learning to share,
Looking past upperclassmen who like to stare.
Freshman year is critical, yet special and dear,
Only the strong survive the whole year.*

*The sophomore blues came and I wanted out.
They said it was typical, so I had no doubt.
If I could hang on, the answer was clear,
Things would get better my junior year.*

*But even before then I met some new friends,
I pledged a sorority and tied up loose ends.
And by the time that junior year arrived,
I had lived out the best year of my life!*

*So junior year came, as I knew it would,
And to my surprise it turned out just as good.
Many more memories made just for me,
Priceless moments offered for free.*

*These were the years I spent on the quad,
Going to Two Boys and praying to God.
Sit-ins and strikes, sadness and cheer,
These special moments rang in senior year.*

*Senior year came and I stopped to look back:
Suddenly my whole life fell on track!
First semester was fine, I stayed out late,
G.P.A. didn't matter, I had a 2.8!*

*But second semester changed, everyone's thinking:
Resume writing replaced all the drinking!
I had to sit straight, I couldn't be a slob,
Forget all my finals, I needed a job!
So off to the C.D.C. I did go,
To put down on paper all that I know.*

*Now that I'm working I stop to ponder,
Do fellow alumni like me ever wonder?
Do you remember the days before Old Main was gone?
Or when they played football on the quad?*

*Were you there when Martin Luther King came?
Think of the profs you knew by first name.
Remember the walks to class in the rain?*

*Were you in choir or Phi Kappa Phi?
Was your voice ever heard in the Warrior cry?
Were you around when Pennington was new,
Or when Dickinson went to four years from two?*

*Do you ever thank God for the friends that you met,
Or the places we all shared and will never forget?
Stop for a moment and think back right now,
I know it's all there in detail somehow.*

*I hope as alumni you manage to find,
That special feeling of the Lycoming kind.
It's history, it is a part of us now,
And we each helped the place to grow.
Somehow it's part of us,
We will never let it go.*

Well, I guess that wasn't so bad. I hope somewhere in all of that, you found your own memories that made Lycoming College special to you. To repeat writers before me, Lycoming is all about special people, and the moments shared with those people. They were, are now, and will always be, SPECIAL.

Student Specialists

By: Catharine Chadwick '88

According to Webster's Dictionary, a colloquium is an "academic meeting at which specialists deliver addresses on a topic or on related topics and then answer questions relating to them." At Lycoming College that definition takes on a new twist. Here, students majoring in astronomy and physics are given the opportunity to become specialists and present their own colloquiums. As a part of the requirement for the major in astronomy or physics, juniors and seniors must attend four semesters of colloquia as well as present two lectures of their own. Typically, the first lecture is presented during the junior year and involves library research. During the senior year the student colloquium is usually centered on lab research.

The colloquium requirement enables astronomy and physics majors to become acquainted with both the theoretical and practical applications of what physicists, astronomers and other physical scientists do professionally. It also gives students the experience of researching and presenting topics, whether it be through library research, a lab investigation that recreates a previous scientist's work, or a lab investigation examining something new. This opportunity allows students to explore unusual subjects such as robotics, fractal geometry and binary stars as well as the more practical physics of parachuting or the physics of compact disc operations. These various topics are presented by students, faculty members and sometimes outside speakers from other colleges, the private sector or even from NASA.

The colloquium requirement also provides astronomy and physics majors with the opportunity to develop their public speaking skills. The presentations are video taped for the students' review. After seeing the video, students are better able to critique their performance in terms of their introduction, presentation, organization and accuracy as well as how well they handled questions from the audience.

Jeff Young '89, a physics graduate, is one student who had the experience of being a "specialist." In his junior year, his colloquium focused on star system SS-433 and he explained the different theories for the way the star system works. During his senior year Young focused his work on binary stars (two stars in orbit of one another) and their gravitational fields. With the aid of an Apple computer, he was able to determine and represent the shape of the gravitational field on a binary star. Ultimately, Young would like to show how binary stars evolve as a result of mass transfer. Mass transfer consists of any mass that is thrown between two stars and indirectly changes the mass of the star. Young plans to attend graduate school to earn a master's degree in astronomy and he believes the colloquia requirement of the physics major has been highly instructional and beneficial.

Catharine Chadwick '88, graduated with a B.A. in English.

Joseph Babcock

By: Catharine Chadwick '88

Although colloquia may have only recently become an integral part of the Lycoming physics major, the physics department itself has been in existence much longer. The roots of the department can be traced back to Joseph D. Babcock, who was a faculty member at Lycoming College and its predecessor institution

Dickinson Junior College from 1931 to 1966.

Joseph Babcock received a bachelor of arts degree from Dickinson College, and in the mid 1940's completed his master of arts degree from Bucknell University. When he began with Dickinson Junior College in 1931, Babcock was somewhat of a free lance man. He contributed to a variety of departments teaching subjects such as preparatory math, chemistry and physics as well as English and physical education.

Following World War II he returned to Lycoming College and taught physics. In 1947 when the change from a two-year junior college to a four-year college took place, a large faculty turnover occurred also. Joseph Babcock, by now associate professor of physics and athletic coach, was one of three faculty members who stayed on through the transition, providing a link between the past and present. He was head of the physics department for a number of years and was also an assistant football coach for eleven years under Earl McKay. Babcock retired in 1966.

After giving 33 years of dedicated teaching service to Lycoming College, Professor Babcock can easily be seen as one of the driving forces that helped to develop the physics department into what it is today. Perhaps he is best remembered by his daughter, Olive Cavanaugh: "Daddy was a humble, modest man who did not want or expect glory or recognition. He quietly did what he loved best: to teach and work with young people."

Editor's Note: Professor Babcock died on May 22, 1970.

College For Kids Features Creative Climate

By: Jule Schreffler

What's so unusual about 250 students roaming Lycoming College's campus at 9 a.m. in the middle of the summer? The unusual thing is, the majority of these students average 4-feet tall. Monday thru Friday, July 17-28, these eager tots, grades 2-8, attended Lycoming's College for Kids workshop.

The workshop, coordinated by Dr. Mel Zimmerman, associate professor of biology, is designed to enhance creativity. The program's enrollment has grown from 66 students in 1986, to 254 students this year.

The students' course choices ranged from Puppet Pleasures to Blood, Guts and Bones. Creativity is stressed in many classes such as Creative Writers and problem solving is explored in a class entitled The Thinker.

All classes involve student activity . . . If students aren't doing a German dance or riding an ambulance to Divine Providence Hospital's emergency room, they're putting together their own newspaper.

"I like the idea that you can take two courses," says Amanda Levine, 12. "The best part is the last day when you can show off what you did," Levine continued.

Many "ooo"s and "ahhh"s came from about 30 wide-eyed students observing Dr. Franz, associate professor of chemistry, perform "magic" in a chemistry lab. Some of Franz's experiments included igniting a man-made snowball and creating a Kid's College non-drinkable soda that changed from ginger ale to "grape-Nehi" every couple seconds.

Three students of the "Mummy's Mystery" class unraveled a few ancient secrets during this summer's College for Kids.

Sitting back to observe and learn is only part of College for Kids. All classes involve student activity to some extent. If students aren't doing a German dance or riding an ambulance to Divine Providence Hospital's emergency room they're putting together their own newspaper.

The Junior Journalism class involves students writing stories, using the computers and designing the pages. The "journalists" then distributed their product at a Learning Fair held July 28.

Many students learn things during the two weeks that aren't usually in the public school's curriculum. One example of this is the What's Mime is Yours class, where students express emotions with their body and learn the technique of mime. The students performed pantomime on exhibition day.

Members of Dr. Kathleen Pagana's class "Through The Eyes Of A Nurse" practice emergency first aid during a mock trauma drill. Students also toured the emergency room, operating room and delivery room at Divine Providence Hospital.

The Learning Fair, or exhibition day, is always held the last day of the program and is intended for all students, their friends and families. Several displays were exhibited in Pennington Lounge by various classes to present what was learned during the summer weeks. A wrapped mummy, homemade ravioli, handmade puppets and bird calling highlighted the Learning Fair this year.

Jule Schreffler, a senior mass communication major at Bloomsburg University, interned with the public relations office during this past summer.

Reflections On Apollo 11 (Continued from page 3.)

Apollo 11 samples indicated the Moon was formed 4.6 billion years ago, about the same time as the Earth. Although the age of the Earth and Moon are roughly the same, the chemical composition of the two bodies differs. The difference is not so much in the composition, but the abundances of certain elements and minerals. The concentrations of potassium, thorium and uranium in the lunar samples were radically different from that of terrestrial rocks. Moon material is richer in titanium and rare-Earth elements than Earth material. Apollo 11 soil samples were 4.6 billion years old, but the igneous samples were found to be one billion years younger. This would seem to indicate that a major event occurred on the Moon 3.6 billion years ago, producing enough heat to cause widespread melting and differentiation of surface rocks. By coincidence, the oldest Earth rocks known crystallized 3.6 billion years ago. Speculation arose that the same events that melted part of the Moon erased Earth's early geological record.

Tranquility Base mirrored in Buzz Aldrin's visor.

How much like Earth is the Moon? Like our planet, the Moon has a crust, a mantle, and most probably, a distinguishable core. The moon had a dynamic history, but that dynamic history has ended. Unlike Earth, the Moon has no life or shows no signs of beginning organic synthesis. The Moon is free of water. It is perhaps one million times drier than the Gobi desert. The Moon's atmosphere consists of a tenuous collection of helium, and large amounts of remnants of the solar wind.

Recovery in the Pacific, July 24, 1969.

What is the Moon made of? The Moon contains much the same material that the Earth contains, although in different proportions. No new elemental particles were discovered in the lunar samples. Four types of rock material dominate Apollo samples. Maria basalts are like common Earth volcanic rocks. An anorthositic rock material, rich in feldspar, is found in the lunar highlands. Then there are small proportions of krep (rocks rich in potassium, rare-earth elements and phosphorus) and a material with very high concentrations of aluminum.

Is the Moon hot or cold? We know the Moon is hot, but we cannot yet be certain of the degree of warmth. Surface temperatures vary between 230° and minus 290° Fahrenheit. A few feet below the surface, all variation disappears. The temperature steadily increases with depth. The heat flow of the Moon is nearly twice that of the Earth, when compared on heat production per unit volume. This seems to indicate a molten region somewhere in the interior. Evidence for a liquid core came on July 17, 1972 when a one-ton meteorite struck the Moon. The Apollo seismic network recorded waves generated by the meteorite and relayed the seismic data to Earth scientists. Such a large meteorite would create waves reaching down to the core. The data showed clearly that all shear waves were absorbed deep within the Moon. (Shear waves generated by a seismic event pass through solids but not liquids.) The data indicated the liquid zone begins 600 miles below the surface. We believe the Moon is still hot but is slowly cooling down. Today the only volcanic evidence is the occasional venting of radon and other gases from such areas as Aristarchus and Grimaldi.

How did the Moon originate? Apollo has killed two major lunar theories. The Moon did not come from the Pacific Basin while the Earth was still molten, and it probably was not an accreted twin planet of Earth. The different chemical make-up of the Moon would seem to indicate it was made out of a different part of the original solar nebula from which formed the solar system. That fact suggests a capture process by the Earth as the Moon approached it, but the laws of orbital dynamics argue strongly against such a process. We still cannot be sure how the Moon came to be our only natural satellite.

The scientific community has plenty of data and samples to work with for decades to come, and since Apollo ended in 1972 there has been plenty of time. The quest for answers continues. Meanwhile the Moon awaits the return of man. Perhaps not another 20 years will pass without human exploration of the Moon. But let us hope that when we return to the Moon, we return to stay and not just visit, that we return in peace and as a human community rather than just as representatives of just one nation and political system.

Lycoming College athletic director Frank Girardi has made it clear that the evolution of the Lady Warrior athletic program is a top priority item as he prepares for the 1990's.

Since 1985 Girardi has added two new intercollegiate sports to the existing program, while seeking the coaching and recruiting leadership needed to support the entire seven sport Lady Warrior sports program.

"With the competition for admission to schools becoming so intense, a college must work to gain the edge—whether it is in academics or athletics," Girardi points out. "At Lycoming, we are striving to make our women's athletic program competitive with colleges similar to us in size and academic curriculum. The emphasis young women have placed on competitive sports in their own personal development mandates an upgrading of the sports we have plus the addition of new sports to our program."

He added, "Athletic programs for our women students have always been here in some fashion. Field hockey, for example, has been a long standing sport. The same can be said about swimming and tennis, but when you look back, there were periods at Lycoming where athletics were not offered for whatever the reason. The way things are today it is our responsibility to make sure that we offer and support a consistent women's athletic program," he adds.

Since 1985 there have been several actions taken to support Girardi's commitment to women's athletics at Lycoming.

Hiring Kim Rockey as Lycoming's first women's athletic director in 1985 gave the program a person responsible for the day to day activity for all women's sports. Rockey also came in as head basketball coach and led the Lady Warrior program to a Division III-NCAA national ranking prior to her resignation in August of 1988. The success of that program has played a definite role in the evolution process, as it provided the Lady Warrior athletic program a national platform from which to speak.

Girardi filled the Lady Warrior basketball coaching position with Jim Orr of Williamsport. Orr, a Lycoming graduate, coached for several high school football and basketball seasons prior to stepping in at Lycoming.

"We hired Jim on an interim basis when Kim got her new job. It was my intention to have him coach one season while I searched for a female to become the new women's athletic director and head coach for basketball. That idea changed when we saw the great relationship between Jim and the players. In fact, they came to me near the end of their (16-7) season and made it clear they wanted me to retain Jim as coach. He had also expressed a strong desire to stay in the program. That program, for this coming season, should be exciting since all of the team members will be returning."

Prior to leaving, Rockey was joined by Girardi in announcing the first official season of Lady Warrior volleyball under the direction of Cheryl Dempsey. The sport had been played at Lycoming as a "club sport" for three years and with the interest shown, Girardi moved it into the intercollegiate program in 1988. Dempsey, a Williamsport physical education teacher, has been successful in high school coaching, directing the Lady Millionaire softball team to a PIAA state championship. She is also a recognized power volleyball player throughout the East and "is anxious to build a competitive program at Lycoming."

In early January Girardi announced the addition of softball to the athletic program, with Curtis Johnson coming on board as a full-time member of the athletic staff. Johnson, recognized as a successful manager of women's fast-pitch softball, has been on an aggressive search for players among the current college community and from among high schools. By the end of the spring semester Johnson noted, "We have some people who can really play already on campus or will come in as freshmen in the fall."

During the spring, Girardi added another very important piece to the structure by naming Anne Haynam to the athletic staff. The 1988 graduate of Hiram (OH) College joined Lycoming on July 1st as assistant basketball coach and chief recruiter for the Lady Warrior athletic program.

"Both are key needs within our system right now. We feel that one of the Lady Warrior basketball coaches should be a female and Anne was a great player in college. She is also a highly sought after coach for summer camps. All of our current women's coaches are limited, because of their job status, in the time they can give to recruiting for their programs. Anne will be able, under the way we have this position currently defined, to get out to make those important personal contacts with female student-athletes in their high schools. That is very important to the future of the College, as well as for the women's athletic program," Girardi explains.

When the 1989-90 term opens, female student-athletes will have eight established intercollegiate athletic programs from which to choose. During the fall season field hockey (Coach Janis Arp), cross country (Coach Jim Burget) and volleyball (Coach Cheryl Dempsey) are available. During the winter months the sports are swimming (Coach Janis Arp) and basketball (Coach Jim Orr). In the spring it will be tennis (Coach Deb Holmes), track and field (Coach Steve Wiser) and softball (Coach Curtis Johnson).

Said Girardi, "The program has finally been put into place. The current coaching staff is highly qualified in their respective sports. It thus becomes a matter of letting the young women out there know that the Lady Warrior athletic program is headed toward a new level of success, and is geared to be competitive with all other schools of comparable size."

Senior Class Pledges Scholarship

The Lycoming College Class of 1989 established a record level of participation for senior pledging when it announced its intention to endow a new scholarship.

Nearly 58 percent of the May graduates pledged $10,047 over a five-year period to provide an annual award for deserving students. This breaks the previous best participation level of 54 percent established by the Class of 1980.

Wayne J. Oplinger, Nanticoke, served as chairman of the senior pledging program, along with class president Amanda L. Gates, Williamsport.

According to Oplinger, the goal of the project was to "help ensure that future students will have an opportunity to complete their education at Lycoming College, especially those who encounter financial obstacles."

Gifts donated by members of the class to the scholarship fund will be counted toward the $13.3 million Campaign for Lycoming College which currently has pledges and gifts exceeding $10.5 million, and which concludes next year.

The Class of 1989 is the eighteenth such group since 1968 to conduct a senior pledge program.

Freshmen Greeted With "Bliss," Powerful Ideas

School started early for the Class of 1993 at Lycoming College. More than 316 freshmen were on campus four days before classes began for the Freshmen Seminar. The weekend of special events was designed to prepare them for the pleasures and perils of academic life.

The weekend featured concert and theater events, films, collective art projects, and a faculty panel, and concluded with Convocation ceremonies.

The heart of the Freshmen Seminar was a series of small-group meetings, in which the freshmen met with a faculty member to discuss "The Power of Myth," the best-selling book by Bill Moyers, a Pulitzer-Prize winning producer of numerous television documentaries, and Joseph Campbell, world-renowned authority on mythology who died in 1987. Campbell's advice to his students, "Follow your bliss," formed one of the major themes of the seminar, not only in the discussion groups but also in the related events.

Dr. Shirley Van Marter, dean of the College, viewed the seminars as a way to "stimulate each freshman's curiosity about the liberal arts by encounters with some challenging ideas about human life and the world we live in." More specific objectives for the program included developing careful habits of "reasoning and reflection" and learning to "discover the power of serious thinking."

Questions from the students were generated from their reading assignment and reflected their concerns, as well as the author's, with maintaining idealism in a society more interested in celebrities than heroes.

Lundy Receives Honorary Degree

John W. Lundy (left), a former trustee of Lycoming College and a Williamsport businessman, received an honorary Doctor of Laws Degree. In making the presentation, outgoing College President Dr. Frederick L. Blumer cited Lundy for his leadership and service to numerous Lycoming human services agencies.

Lycoming College Develops Bureau For Economic Data

Lycoming College has established a bureau of economic research in an effort to become a more integral part of the Williamsport/Lycoming area economic scene.

The new bureau, funded in part with a $14,000 grant from the Kemper Foundation, will be headed by Dr. Roger Opdahl, chairman of the College's department of economics, and Dr. Mehrdad Madresehee, assistant professor of managerial economics.

Madresehee said the bureau's primary function will be to conduct economic research, publish reports, and serve as a host for conferences and seminars.

"Lycoming College has always maintained a good relationship with the community in general," Madresehee said, noting its involvement in the cultural areas such as the Arena Theatre. "With the establishment of the new bureau, we hope to create a more formal relationship with area businesses," he said. The first step "will be to establish a statistical data base for Lycoming County. This will give faculty a chance to polish their skills as well as giving students an opportunity to enroll in internships and independent studies and receive academic credit for their work."

Another important aspect of the new bureau will be to conduct meetings with the Chamber of Commerce, county planning commissions and local leaders in the community. Results of these meetings, he said, will help the bureau to establish topics for a series of seminars and conferences, the first of which is scheduled for spring, 1990.

In addition to hosting these seminars, Madresehee said the new bureau will publish a periodic newsletter that will provide updates on current research in economic development as it affects area businesses.

Blumer Fund Established

A $50,000 endowed fund has been established at Lycoming College in recognition of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Blumer's thirteen years of service as president and first lady of Lycoming College. Gifts from the campus community, College Board of Trustees and friends will help underwrite annual lectures and/or performances by eminent scholars and/or artists.

Dr. Blumer was recently named to hold the newly created Theo and Belle Moll Chair in Faith and Life at Baldwin-Wallace College, Berea, Ohio.

Shangraw Named Chairman Of Lycoming College Trustees

Robert L. Shangraw, first vice president of Merrill Lynch, has been named chairman of the Lycoming College Board of Trustees—the first person from Williamsport to chair the board in nearly 70 years. He also is serving as national chairman of the Campaign for Lycoming College.

Joining Shangraw as officers of the board are city residents Nathan W. Stuart, vice chairman and chairman of the executive committee, and Ann Pepperman, assistant secretary. Appointed secretary was Leo A. Calistri, of Syracuse, NY.

Five new members, including three area men, were named to the board. Appointed were Jud Rogers, Grit Publications chief executive officer; John Saeger, chief executive officer of the Williamsport branch of Pennsylvania Power and Light Co., and Paul John, president of Ritz Craft Homes, Mifflinburg.

Other new board members are South Williamsport native Kenneth Polcyn, president of Communications Technology Applications, McLean, VA, and Dr. Kenrick Kahn, of Troy, clergy member of the Central Pennsylvania Conference of the United Methodist Church.

New Participation Records Set

Alumni and friends of Lycoming College have established the highest levels ever of participation in giving to the College during the fiscal year ending June 30.

The record year produced gifts from 26.4% of active alumni, a full seven percentage points higher than in fiscal year 87-88 and the highest that it has ever been in Lycoming's history. Additionally, 1,074 alumni and friends made leadership contributions of $100 or more, the most ever and nearly two-and-a-half times the number five years ago.

"I am impressed that the response to the College's needs has been so exceptional," said Dr. James E. Douthat, newly-elected President of the institution. "Lycoming is fortunate to have alumni and friends who are intensely loyal. This phenomenon is not always enjoyed among small, liberal arts institutions."

Included among the reasons cited by College officials for the dramatic increase in participation are the current Campaign for Lycoming College, which officially concludes next June 30, and special programs to encourage gifts.

Recent years have seen continued growth, following a more stable pattern witnessed earlier in the decade. Alumni gifts have shown marked increases in both dollars and participation in the five years since The New Lycoming College Fund was introduced to campus supporters.

Overall, gifts to the College continued to outpace previous years with more than $2.5 million being received. This is the second highest level of record and reflects receipt of yet another $1 million gift. The first contribution of this magnitude was received during the 1987-88 fiscal year and was valued at more than $1.5 million.

Leadership gifts, the base for all major individual donations to the College, continue to increase in record numbers. In only its second year of existence, the Founders Circle (recognizing gifts of $2,500 and more) has attained 42 members.

Gifts made to Lycoming College in memory of a friend or loved one hold special significance for both the donor and the College. Such gifts are encouraged and fully respected in all regards.

Many alumni and friends make large gifts to the College through a properly prepared will or by a trust arrangement that becomes effective in accord with one's own estate plans. There are annuities and "living" trust arrangements, too, that provide income for life and a deferred gift to the College. Many of our currently endowed scholarships were established in this manner. For further information, contact the Development Office at Lycoming College.

Kemper Grant Supports Bureau Of Economic Research

With an $18,000 grant from the James S. Kemper Foundation of Long Grove, Illinois, Dr. Roger Opdahl, chair, department of economics, and Dr. Mehrdad Madresehee, assistant professor of economics, have established a bureau of economic research.

The bureau's primary function will be to conduct economic research, publish reports and serve as a host for conferences and seminars to benefit the Williamsport/Lycoming County geographic area. According to Madresehee, "With the establishment of the new bureau, we hope to create a more formal relationship with area businesses." Our first step "will be to establish a statistical data base for Lycoming County. This will give faculty a chance to polish their skills as well as provide students an opportunity to enroll in internships and independent studies and receive academic credit for their work."

This project, made possible by the Kemper grant, will expand Lycoming's services to the community while providing an exceptional research experience for current students.

Campaign Enters Final Year

The Campaign for Lycoming College, scheduled to conclude on June 30, 1990, is nearing the $11 million mark toward its $13.3 million program goal. Many tangible signs of change are obvious on the campus as gifts and grants help enhance the teaching and learning environment for students and faculty alike.

New microcomputer labs are evident in the academic center and in the new renovated mass communication building. The inventory of scientific instrumentation has expanded in both chemistry and biology laboratories resulting in greater capabilities for instruction and undergraduate research. New endowments provide financial support for scholarships, loan funds, faculty prizes and lectureships.

Your help is needed to assist the College achieve all the educational objectives of this Campaign, the largest fundraising drive in Lycoming's history. ## Lonza Reacts To Needs In Chemistry

A new Hewlett Packard Gas Chromatograph was recently purchased with an $11,600 grant from Lonza, Inc., headquartered in Fair Lawn, New Jersey. Lonza plant manager in Williamsport, Ronald V. DeFeo commented, "We believe this gift will assist the College in its efforts to broaden opportunities for meaningful study in the chemical sciences. Lonza is pleased to support Lycoming and happy to see the College strengthening its science programs."

Responding to the gift, Dr. David Franz, chemistry department chair, noted that, "In addition to enhancing our instructional capabilities in several courses, this system will also help us in our research activities. For example, Dr. Chriss McDonald, assistant professor of chemistry, and his students are developing novel methods for protecting aldehydes and ketones during organic reactions. The gas chromatograph is a critical tool for monitoring these reactions since it can separate and analyze complex mixtures."

Lycoming College is grateful to Lonza, Inc. for its interest in science instruction at the undergraduate level and for their financial investment which has made the acquisition of this state-of-the-art instrument possible. The gas chromatograph will be moved to its new location sometime between the fall and spring semesters.

Micro Marketing International Equips New Computer Lab

A recent donation of Epson computer equipment valued at $20,000 will be used to create a new, small computer lab in the academic center for advanced business students.

The business administration faculty plans to use these resources to investigate new software applications for the curriculum and work with small groups of students in on-line database searching and statistical programs not currently available in our larger computer labs.

MMI President Robert S. Malcolm was authorized by Epson corporate officials to donate the necessary items to equip this advanced microcomputer lab after receiving a formal request from the business administration department.

On The Road Again

During this past summer, Lycoming College alumni were "on the move" as alumni events were held from Boston to Baltimore, Syracuse to Washington, D.C. and points in between.

James G. Scott '70, area alumni representative, coordinated the New England alumni event held at the Portside Restaurant, Salisbury, MA.

Nancy Davis Morris '78 hosted a dinner for Northern New Jersey alumni at the Fairmont Country Club, Chatham, NJ. Shirley Van Marter, dean of the College, was the featured speaker.

President James Douthat was introduced to alumni at several regional gatherings. Barry C. Hamilton '70, area representative, coordinated a dinner at the Union League Club of Philadelphia. Charles J. Kocian '50, area representative, hosted a buffet dinner in the Gold Room of the Rayburn Office Building in Washington, DC. Harrisburg area alumni were treated to a VIP tour of the state capitol and a buffet dinner. David G. Argall '80 coordinated the event. The Williamsport area alumni attended a picnic followed by the play "Some Enchanted Evening" at the Arena Theatre. Kent Baldwin '64 coordinated the evening activities. Syracuse, NY area alumni met Dr. Douthat at a reception hosted by Judy and Leo Calistri '56 and '59 at their home in Fayetteville, NY.

Baltimore area alumni spent a summer evening with the birds . . . Baltimore Orioles that is! Nearly three dozen Baltimore/Washington alumni attended a pregame chicken barbeque dinner followed by the Orioles/Cleveland Indians game. Before the game the Orioles mascot paid a visit and posed for pictures with the group. Lycoming's visit to Baltimore must have brought the Orioles good luck. As of press time the team was still in first place realizing it all began on that night in May!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

Just a note to say thanks for your efforts with the "Quarterly" which I enjoy reading very much. It has come a long way in the last few years. Congrats! Arthur "Buzz" C. Wolff Jr. '70

Dear Editor:

I just received my copy of the June 1989 Lycoming Quarterly, and I can't believe my eyes. Right there on the cover — "Plagerism." "PLAGERISM!?" It's bad enough that every day I see poor spelling and shoddy grammar in the media, advertisements, and notices from my son's school. But to have such an error in spelling appear on the cover of a publication from my dear old alma mater is offensive and intolerable. If you can justify your spelling, I will excuse the variation. But as I see it, it's just plain wrong.

Keep up the good work.

Hilda (Schmerling) Landesberg 1975

Dear Editor:

How did the misspelling of plagiarism as "plagerism" get past the proofreader? Is an explanation or apology planned for the next issue?

Paul MacKenzie

Associate Professor

Foreign Languages and Literatures

Lycoming College

Editor's Note:

MEA CULPA! Thanks to those readers who either called or wrote to point out that the word plagiarism was inadvertently misspelled on the cover of the June Quarterly. Did we copy it wrong? No, the simple fact is we goofed. Armed with a new pair of eyeglasses and a more complete dictionary we vow to do better. Thanks for taking the time to let us know.

PUBLISHERS LAMENT

The typographical error is a slippery thing and sly;
You can hunt till you are dizzy, but it somehow will get by.
Till the forms are off the presses, it is strange how still it keeps;
It shrinks down in a corner and it never stirs or peeps.
That typographical error, too small for human eyes;
Till the ink is on the paper, when it grows to mountain size.
The boss, he stares with horror; then he grabs his hair and moans;
The copy reader drops his head upon his hands and groans.
The remainder of the issue may be clean, as clean can be;
But that typographical error is the thing you always see.
